

This seems a sensible idea but should be limited to the inspection of animals only where the inspection does not cause distress to the animal. E.G looking at a cat or dog through a wire mesh panel in a pet carrier would not. unpacking tropical fish and the like certainly would and is likely to cause stress which in turn could easily lead to death. there needs to be a sensible and common sense approach to this issue.